Project Description

One of the current initiatives is surveillance at Rietvlei Nature Reserve in Pretoria. Any volunteer can go to the area, sign in, get vehicle surveillance identification and patrol the area. This is to create a presence in the area and report any suspect behaviour concerning the safety of the Rhinos in the Rietvlei Nature Reserve.

This project should provide volunteers with a mobile app that will record the area they have monitored, suggest routes of areas that haven't been monitored recently, allow them to log notes and pictures of any suspicious behaviour and send alerts. But we want a way to 'reward' the volunteers by means of a blockchain token.

It illustrates that the project will contain an Android app and a management web portal. The application will consist of route management, patrol tracking and Token management. Data, like tracking logs and user details, will be stored in a database. Certain external services will be used such as Google maps API.
